

THE SCHOOLHOUSE

Joni's class visits the St. Michael's College Teaching Gardens

on October 11, 2011

Joni's Alpha 2s and Taus paired up with education and biology majors from St. Michael's College to tour the Teaching Gardens at St. Michael's.

The class visited the Books In Bloom garden which houses plants and flowers mentioned in different, familiar children's stories. "I like the garden that the grew on its own - just the wild plants from Vermont," explained Julia CichoskiKelly about the garden of native and wild Vermont plants. Students especially enjoyed visiting the word garden where there are more than 300 words - including firewood, hug, sky and succeed -sandblasted onto different rocks from which students made rubbings with crayons. Zoe remembered a particular flower in the world garden she enjoyed, "I don't think there was even a dot of green. It was really beautiful and orangey."

Thanks to Suzie DeBrosse for arranging the trip!!

Current News

- Spring/Mother's Day brunch bags: Online sales start Monday, April 9...
- The terribly busy Omegas...
- A conversation with our newest volunteer...
- The Alpha 1s measure up...
- Making music...