

1.1

A function  $f$  consists of a domain (a set,
which for us will usually be a subset of the real numbers) and a rule that assigns each element  $x$  of the domain to exactly one element, called  $f(x)$  of another set (again, for us, usually a subset of the real numbers.)